It seems there is some disposition to blame the JOURNAL for the losses sustained by the Democratic party in the recent election for delegates to the Convention. It is said the call of the Convention was a blunder and that the Journal is responsible for it,-Having heard the charge, the Tarbore Southerner comes to our defence in very handsome style. It says:

Occasionally we hear men of respectable common sense charge that the call of a Convention was a blunder and speak ill of the Witmington Journal in consequence. The JOURNAL did what was right and did its daty to its conscience and country with distinguished ability. The present constitution is unsuited to our people, cumbersome, expensive and oppressive; it was therefore the duty of the press to convince the public and our Legislators of the necessity of amending it. Both did what it was their duty to do, and the only blunder was the delay, timidity and hesitation in calling the Convention, together with the apathy that was displayed by our friends after the call. Had every paper and every democrat done his duty in a manner like that of the Journal we would have swept the State, We honor the Journal for its course and all right minded men agree with us It is a high-toned, conscientions and able newspaper and never takes a stand that is antagonistic to the best interests of the white people of North

GIVE THE NAMES

The Augusta Chronicle and Sentine thinks that Governor Vance ought to publish the names "of the leading men in Richmond-chiefly Senators and Representatives in the Confederate Congress" who requested him to make separate terms with President Lincoln or the submission of North Carolina to the Federal Government.

We concur with our Georgia contemporary in thinking that Governor Vance ought to give to the public the names of the parties referred to unless, indeed, his personal honor may be involved by some pledge to secrecy. Those parties sought to involve North Carolina in the humiliation and disgrace of first making terms with the enemy, in a word to make her the scape-goat of their own wrong doings, and they ought to be exposed. Let their names be given to the public. The Chronical and Sentinal says:

Gov. Vance stated in speech that after the failure of the Hampton Road's Conference he was visited by Gov.
